

A CHILDREN'S OFRENDA

Honoring Our Ancestors

Many cultures from all around the world designate certain days of the year to honor their ancestors. Some of those cultural celebrations are modest while others are incredibly elaborate and colorful.

Día De los Muertos, celebrated by many Latin American cultures, can be expressed by families through small personal ofrendas or offerings (altars) in their homes, or through large and bold community celebrations that may include Mariachi music, parades or processions, food, dancers and much, much more.

This year The Placerville Sugar Skull Art Walk, a local community project, is centered on the art and traditions of the Days of the Dead.

The project's purpose is to engage our community in creating collaborative art, to position Latinx/Indigenous art forms in places of high visibility on Placerville's Main Street, to create space for community members to honor loved-ones who have passed away, and to bridge cultural divides in our town.
